Chances are the Apple II was your first computer. More than 30 years later, it's still going strong. Isn't it time you reacquainted yourself with an old friend?

KansasFest is the world's only annual Apple II expo where you can meet retrocomputing enthusiasts from around the world for five days and five very late nights of sessions, programming, stories, tips and tricks, and camaraderie. "KansasFest exceeded my expectations in every way," said 1 MHz podcast host Carrington Vanston after attending his first KFest. "It was a phenomenal trip that was everything I could possibly hope it could be."

You know what would make it even more phenomenal?... You! So come learn about all the things that "just can't be done on an Apple II."
